This article deals with a 2-D problem of quasi-static deformation of a multilayered thermoelastic medium due to surface loads and heat source. The propagator matrix is obtained for the multilayered formalism of thermoelastic layers. Analytical solutions, in terms of the displacements, stresses, heat flux and temperature function are obtained for normal strip and line loads, shear strip and line loads and strip and line heat sources. Numerical computation of the obtained analytical expressions is also done. The effects of layering have been studied. For the verification of the results, results of earlier studies have been obtained as particular cases of the present study.

Key words: multilayered half-space, thermoelastic, propagator matrix, surface loads, heat source.

1. Introduction

Multilayered structures exist in the nature frequently and are relevant to numerous engineering and geophysical problems (Yang et al. [1]). The Earth's structure may be considered as a multilayered half-space. In addition to the above, there are various manmade materials or structures that can be regarded as multilayered structures for modelling applications in different fields, viz. civil, mechanical and biomechanical engineering, microelectronics and optics. The multilayered structure is assumed to be composed of homogeneous parallel layers.

Multilayered Earth's model has been considered by many researchers while studying the source problems. Singh [2] studied 3D problems of the static deformations of a multilayered elastic medium containing internal dislocation sources. Bache and Harkrider [3] considered the Earth as a layered model and formulated the theory of body waves due to a general seismic source. To investigate the two and three dimensional static deformations of an elastic medium, due to various surface loads (strip, circular and rectangular surface loads), Small and Booker [4] applied the finite layer method. Singh and Garg [6] studied two dimensional elastic dislocations in an isotropic multilayered half-space. Garg and Singh [7] studied two

Fundamental Solution and Study of Plane Waves in Bio-Thermoelastic Medium with DPL

ABSTRACT

The fundamental solution of the system of differential equations in bio-thermoelasticity with dual phase lag (DPL) in case of steady oscillations in terms of elementary function is constructed and basic property is established. The tissue is considered as an isotropic medium and the propagation of plane harmonic waves is studied. The Christoffel equations are obtained and modified with the thermal as well as bio-thermoelastic coupling parameters. These equations explain the existence and propagation of three waves in the medium. Two of the waves are attenuating longitudinal waves and one is non-attenuating transverse wave. The thermal property has no effect on the transverse wave. The velocities and attenuating factors of longitudinal waves are computed for a numerical bioheat transfer model with phase lag. The variation with frequency, thermal parameters, blood perfusion parameter and phase lag parameter are presented graphically. Also the reflection of plane wave from a stress free isothermal boundary of isotropic bio-thermoelastic half space in the context of DPL theory of thermoelasticity is studied. The amplitude ratios of various reflected waves are obtained and these amplitude ratios are further used to obtain the energy ratios of various reflected waves. These energy ratios are function of the angle of incidence and bio-thermoelastic properties of the medium. The expressions of energy ratios have been computed numerically for a particular model to show the effect of Poisson ratio, blood perfusion rate and phase lag parameters.

This paper presents a modified graded mesh for singularly perturbed two-parameter problems. The mesh is generated recursively using Newton's algorithm and some implicitly defined function. The problem is solved numerically using the finite element method based on higher order polynomials of degree  $p \geq 1$ . We prove parameter uniform convergence of optimal order in  $\epsilon$ -weighted energy norm. A test example is taken to compare the proposed graded mesh with others found in the literature.

1 | INTRODUCTION

Singularly perturbed boundary value problems involving two parameters model various phenomena in physics,<sup>1,2</sup> chemistry,<sup>3,4</sup> and life sciences.<sup>5,6</sup> Solutions of these problems reveal multi-scale character. There are regions of small width in which their solutions change rapidly and exhibit steep gradients. Relative values of small parameters give rise to boundary layers of different widths at the boundaries of the domain. Standard numerical methods on uniform meshes do not provide a reasonable approximation of solutions in layer regions until we take a large number of mesh points.<sup>7,8</sup> But this is practically unreasonable. One idea to overcome this limitation is to use locally refined meshes. These meshes are dense in layer regions whereas standard outside. Suitable layer-adapted meshes are easy to generate provided the location and width of the layers are available in advance. This condition is itself too restrictive because this a priori information is not readily available. In recent years, many authors made efforts to resolve boundary layers.<sup>7,9,10</sup>

An ordinary differential equation having two parameters and smooth data is studied in Kumar et al.,<sup>11</sup> whereas the case when the data are nonsmooth is dealt within.<sup>12</sup> A second-order differential equation involving a single parameter is the subject matter of Chandru et al.<sup>13</sup> and Chandru and Shanthi.<sup>14</sup> Moreover, in Chandru, Prabha et al.,<sup>15</sup> authors deal with a singularly perturbed two-parameter problem with a discontinuous source term. The method of averaging is used at the discontinuous points, and a hybrid monotone difference scheme is presented. It is proved that the method is parameter uniform. A singularly perturbed parabolic initial-boundary value problem containing two small parameters is brought to attention in Das and Mehrmann.<sup>16</sup> In this work, the equidistribution of a positive monitor function is taken into account to generate an adaptive mesh.

Further, a system of coupled singularly perturbed reaction-diffusion problems having diffusion parameters with different magnitudes is the subject matter of Das and Natesan.<sup>17</sup> In this paper, layer-adapted meshes are generated using

Abstract

The aim of the present work is to introduce the concepts of deferred weak statistical convergence and deferred weak Cesàro summability on normed spaces. We prove some properties with related to these concepts and we also give some new related notions and some inclusion relations with examples.

1 Introduction

Zygmund [23] introduced the idea of statistical convergence. Fast [11] and Steinhaus [19] introduced statistical convergence to assign limit to sequences which are not convergent in the usual sense independently in the same year.

We begin by recalling the notion of asymptotic (or natural) density of a set  $A \subset \mathbb{N}$  such that

$$\delta(A) = \lim_{n \rightarrow \infty} \frac{1}{n} |\{k \leq n : k \in A\}|,$$

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Before we get into the thick of things I would like to add a few words of heart-felt thanks to the people who have been, directly or indirectly, part of the completion process of my thesis.

At the very first step I express my sincere thanks to my Supervisor Prof. Ram Niwas, Department of English, Kurukshetra University, Kurukshetra without whose encouraging and expert advice this task could not have been completed.

My thanks are also due to the faculty members in the Dept. of English, Kurukshetra University, Kurukshetra for their co-operation. I am thankful to Prof. S.L. Paul for his critical insights and constant inspiration. The staff members at the JLN Library, Kurukshetra University, Kurukshetra, Central Library PU, Chandigarh, and Central Library MDU, Rohtak helped me collect the required study material for which I am immensely grateful. Further, my friends Mahender Singh Nain, Radhe Shyam and Sunil Ranolia, provided me with a constant platform for discussion on problems relating to this work for which I am grateful to them. Harwinder deserves special thanks for having typed various parts this dissertation with meticulous efforts.

I express my heartiest gratitude to my family members, especially to my sister Saraswati who continually encouraged me to work on my thesis. My younger brothers Vikas and Vishal took care of all family affairs during my PhD and gave me enough time for my research work. I could never have completed this task successfully without their blessings.
